"The just as giants and stargods forged the Western world and the world of the Gods, the gods forged the subjects of their labor, and they opened before them a wide-gaping maw and devoured them, and they became the one force and the begetter of all things. But dark, black seeds of ash grew from this making, and terrible taint and meanness was brooding there. These seeds spewed forth two of their number; they were the Just-As Giants, and it is from their dark seed that the Drow were born, who are not our brothers; not our brethren. And it is from them that the Giants arose, and the Dwarves; and from their deep cravings the Giants, and the Dwarves. And the Golems rose out of these seeds, that they might be the begetters of the works of dark and dreadful workers, and they are as dark and as dismal as their parents. Then all, all the world and all the world of monsters, were in bondage to the Giants and their children. And all the world was divided into three kingdoms; and there were three Lords of the Three Kingdoms and their children. And they made three gods that they might bow themselves before these three Lords of the Three Kingdoms and their children. And they made the world of darkness, the Kingdom of Utters Black; and in this darkness they made their company, that they might live together. They that are known as Demons, and they who hold the Blood Runel, and they who bare the Ash Sword, and they that are called the Chieftains of the Gray Realm. And thus were all created, this wholly and in every respect in their way; until the day when they were one person, and their blood ran together and they were one with common resolve, and every thought was of one."
