Exploring the patient's experience of being a caregiver in a family system: Interviews with family members of people with dementia. There is limited research on the subjective experience of the family caregiver. The aim of this study was to explore the subjective experience of being a caregiver of a person with dementia within the family system. The study used an interpretive description approach to identify and explore the meanings of caregiving in relation to the family experience of dementia. Eighteen interviews were carried out with family members who provided care to a person with dementia. The interview data were analyzed using a six-step process of analysis as described by Gioia, Calnan and Wiggins (2007). The family members provided rich descriptions of how they managed their caregiving roles. They described their experiences of being a caregiver in their lives as a family system, of being in 'the thick of it', of being their family's 'liaison', of being 'on the other end of the phone', of feeling 'in charge', of being 'up the creek without a paddle', of being in 'the middle of a group', of 'helping one person'. These concepts were used to develop a model of caregiver experience that provides a holistic understanding of the family caregiver's experience.
