of drawing districts for Republicans and Democrats could signal that political gridlock over reform is the only remedy for the broken criminal justice system, which disproportionately locks up people of color and the poor. As the court prepares to rule on a case in the upcoming term, it's particularly relevant given what the U.S. is failing to do to both curb mass incarceration and racial and ethnic discrimination in its criminal justice system.

Advertisement Justice Clarence Thomas argues that “we may need a constitutional amendment” to do so. Last month, the court ordered the U.S. Department of Justice to deliver written justification by c6a93da74d
